RESEARCH INTERESTS

- Consumer experiences
- Product design and aesthetics
- Brands and branding
- Social relations with humans, pets, brands, and AIs
- Emotional-motivational constructs in consumer behavior (desire, hope, pride, love, curiosity, trust, guilt, shame)
- Consumer neuroscience (neurophysiological explanations of consumer decision making)
- Marketing analytics (behavioral experiments, fMRI, psychometrics, response accuracy, data triangulation)

Research leadership experience:

Director, Arizona Think Tank on Behavioral Decision Making, University of Arizona, 2019-present

- Collaboratively developed Think Tank’s research mission with goal to become a top research program in Behavioral Decision Making.
- Collaboratively developed a strategic agenda for the Think Tank that focuses on interdisciplinary research areas of excellence and corresponding strategic priorities, such as Behavioral Economics, Data Science, Consumer Judgment and Decision Making, and Decision Neuroscience.
- Founded a speaker series with high-profile scholars, the “BDM Think Tank Series of Distinguished and Emerging Scholars,” to provide keynote talks and bring together Eller researchers.
- Enhanced Eller College’s webpage content with videos of talks.
- Developed and implemented the branding for the Arizona Think Tank for Behavioral Decision Making to further stress College’s visibility.
- Formed a high-profile faculty body to lead the Think Tank, the “BDM Think Tank Roundtable,” consisting of senior and midlevel research faculty.

Founding President and Executive Director, Association for NeuroPsychoEconomics, 2005-2023

- Initiated and funded the Martin Reimann Young Investigator Award in Consumer Neuroscience. The award is presented to early-career scholars who have demonstrated significant contributions to the field within 8 years of obtaining their PhD. This award is reserved for scholars whose work, whether in academia or industry, has markedly advanced our understanding of consumer behavior through the lens of neuroscience. The award is bestowed annually at the NeuroPsychoEconomics Conference, following an evaluation by a panel of expert scholars and fellows from the Association.

- Founded and edited an academic journal, the Journal of Neuroscience, Psychology, and Economics, and developed it into the premier neuroeconomics publication in partnership with the American Psychological Association (5-year impact factor as of 2023: 1.5; ranked a top 20 econ journal).
- Developed an annual scholarly conference in partnership with the American Psychological Association, which reconvenes annually since 2005.
- Developed an annual scholarly workshop on consumer neuroscience in partnership with the Association for Consumer Research, which reconvenes since 2016.
